

01/10/2025 October Month, Notes Of Lesson.

6. A New Beginning.

Illustration:-

Keywords:-

1. unique
2. community
3. consequently
4. Makara
5. crocodile
6. rotten
7. constantly
8. elated
9. Pambupatti
10. smelled

III Synonyms:-

1. feisty - strong and determined
2. confined - restricted
3. batch - a set or group.
4. unease - anxiety or worry.
5. unison - together

IV Antonyms:-

1. unique x common
2. elated x sad
3. rotten x fresh
4. strange x normal

V Homophones:-

1. role - roll
2. ate - eight
3. one - won
4. no - know
5. bee - see

VI Answer the following questions with reference to context.

1. At first the animals were sad but then they realized that there was more food, more water and more space for them, as Makara had said.

a. Why were the animals sad?

The animals were sad because the turtles had been forced to leave the forest.

b. Who was Makara?

Makara was the biggest crocodile and the king of Pambupatti forest.

2. Can you trust someone who is green one minute and red the next?

a. Who says the above line and to whom?

Makara said these lines to the other crocodiles.

b. Who is the speaker talking about?

The speaker is talking about lizards here.

Answer the following questions:-

What lesson does the story teach us?

The story teaches us that every living being is unique and has his own role to play in the community. One should respect everyone's presence and ability.

2. What problems did the animals face after the snakes left?

After the snakes left the forest, there was no one left to eat the rats. Consequently, there were rats everywhere, and they even ate all the lizards and crocodile eggs.

3. Why did Makara ask the lizards to leave?

Makara asked the lizards to leave because of their strange habit of changing colour. According to him, someone who changed colour like a lizard could not be trusted.

4. What did the baby crocodile tell Makara?

The baby crocodile told Makara that the forest was no longer beautiful and smelled of rotten fruits and animals. Moreover, the crocodiles living there were constantly attacked by frogs and rats.

5. Why did the children clap at the end of the story?

The children were elated to know that all the reptiles had returned to the forest of Pandrupatti and it was beautiful.

again, and expressed their happiness by clapping.

2/10/20